Spanish is undoubtedly one of the most beautiful and popular languages in the world. This is a very lively, sonorous and emotional language! The Spaniards sometimes call it Castilian because of the region of Castilla, in which it originated. In general, the roots of the birth of the Spanish language go deep into the third century BC. As a result of penetration into the most ancient Basque language of the Phoenician, Ancient Greek and Celtic dialects of Galicia, the basis for the Spanish language was born. Along with the ubiquitous English and, surpassing the number of Chinese users, people learn this language with special interest and love. And it is not surprising, because so much literary depth and artistic diversity can be heard in the charming and caressing Spanish words and sounds. Why are only songs performed with the famous Spanish guitar. Plus, the Spanish language is fairly easy to learn. For those who finally decided to learn the language of Cervantes, already in the early stages of learning there is an immersion into the wonderful world of Spain. To learn Spanish you need to fall in love with Spanish culture. And how this can be avoided, because the culture of Spain has a tangible impact on literature, architecture and world art in general. Plunging headlong into the colorful culture of the country as in the warm waters of the Mediterranean, thanks to the magic of the word, each person absorbs the spirit of this country, its beauty, its evening hot sun and rich culture. But Spanish is not only paella, bullfighting, castanets, Por favor, guitar, Real, flamenco and Don Quixote La Mancha, which, by the way, is second in terms of translations right after the Bible. It is much deeper, brighter and more beautiful. Here Miguel de Cervantes worked, wrote his poems and plays by Garcia Lorca, it was here that the great creator Salvador Dali and the wonderful artist Francisco Goya lived and worked [1].

Spanish is widely spread all over the world, for example, in the USA over 40 million people speak it. This is practically the second language of America. Nowadays, a little over 400 million people are happy to speak the language of Cervantes. In addition, Spanish has the status of an official language in 22 countries of the world, including Mexico, Colombia, Argentina, Brazil, Venezuela and Peru. That is why Spanish has about 40 different dialects! It's a paradox, but the largest number of Hispanic populations is not Mexico, but Spain. To learn Spanish in order to visit the homeland of famous and compelling singers, Julio and Enrique Iglesias, the primary goal of everyone who has mastered the first lessons. Spain is a great place for recreation, cultural enrichment and language practice [2].

Learning Spanish not only gives you one of the most beautiful and popular languages in the world, but also opens up great opportunities, for example, in tourism, business negotiations, or an interpreter's career, and the ability to compare peoples' thinking and culture. The opportunity to leave for practice and stay in Spain attracts many people. In a word, learning Spanish opens the door to the wonderful world of Spain's rich culture, enriches a person, both on an intellectual and on a spiritual level.
